Tool Kit for Developing Partnerships

- Most partnerships will be informal based on similar mission, values, and goals.
- A good way of strengthening partnerships is by entering into memorandums of understanding or contracts to provide joint services to your clients.
- Strong partnerships that are memorialized in writing can also seek out funding to support their collaborative work.
- Have somebody dedicated to maintaining relationship.
- Warm-handoff are better than cold referrals so clients do not get lost.
- Co-located offices or environment are better than separate offices.

Accommodations

Change the rules, policies, practices, or services to ensure person with a disability has the same opportunities as others.

Unless the disability is apparent on its face Generally will need a letter or note from someone that knows the situation explaining the need for the change and how it may help mitigate the symptoms of the person with a disability.
Staying Housed

Change policy of requiring consumer or client to pay now and wait for rental relief.

Barriers to Housing After an Eviction

Evictions and housing related debt

Can ask landlord to change their policy of denying housing to applicants that have an eviction or housing related debt if the eviction or debt was because of their disability.
